Rutger Park Residences

UTICA, ONEIDA COUNTY

LANDMARK STATUS: Rutger Park local, State and National Historic District; No. 3 Rutger Park designated National Historic Landmark.

THREAT: Vacancy, deferred maintenance.

Located in a planned park-like setting in what was once the rural outskirts of Utica, the architecturally significant residences at Rutger Park are linked to state and national leaders who made Utica their home in the 19th century. Two are associated with nationally prominent architects, especially active in New York State. Number 3 Rutger Park was designed by Philip Hooker of Albany, and the imposing 1854 Italian Villa style house at 1 Rutger Park is considered one of Andrew Jackson Davis' most important works. Appropriate preservation of these properties hold the promise of spurring new economic activity within Utica. Currently, the buildings are vacant, and are enduring yet another winter without stabilization. Plans for their stabilization and rehabilitation should be made promptly so that these local, state and national treasures can again become useful and a point of pride in Utica and the state.
